BELIEVE UPSALA BANK BANDITS WHO SHOT CASHIER, ESCAPED WITH $2,400 LOOT, IN HIDING IN CENTRAL FARMING COMMUNITY

ADVANCE THEORY THAT ROBBERY WAS NOT PRE-ARRANGED

BELIEF STRENGTHENED BY THE FACT THAT ROBBERY DID NOT KNOW LAYOUT

Belief that three men who wounded Cashier C. W. Johnson during a hold-up of the Farmers State Bank of Upsala were from some farming community in central Minnesota, possibly in the Brainerd lake region, spurred peace officers today in their hunt for the men.

Although the bandits obtained $2,400 in the holdup, authorities believed the robbery had not been planned until the men appeared in front of the bank at Upsala.

The fact that the bandits did not know their way about the bank and had to demand the help of the wounded Johnson in locating the money in the vault was taken as an indication that they had not planned the robbery until they arrived in Upsala.

Posses which responded to the warning sent out from Upsala returned to Little Falls after the holdup without obtaining any definite clues, although one group of men said they had traced a suspicious automobile several miles before it disappeared.

Several persons were held for questioning from the farm near where the automobile was last seen.

KNUTSON TO OPPOSE INSTRUCTED UNIT FOR HOOVER AT MEET

ALSO DISAGREES TO RIGHT FOR SECOND TERM NOMINATION IN EDITORIAL

Wadena, Minn., Nov. 7.—(UP)—Congressman Harold Knutson today announced in a personally written editorial in his newspaper, the Wadena Pioneer Journal, that he will oppose giving President Hoover an instructed delegation to the republican national convention.

Knutson, long regarded as a "regular," also disagreed with the stand of former President Calvin Coolidge that Mr. Hoover has a right to second term nomination.

Knutson is chairman of the Minnesota delegation in the house and is one of the leaders of northwest republicans.

"If the much heralded, but up to date, invisible turn toward prosperity should become a visible reality by spring nothing can prevent Mr. Hoover's nomination and election, but if present conditions continue it would seem the part of wisdom for the party leaders to give serious thought to certain readjustments."

Air Expeditions, One of Them Headed by Fairbanks, to Seek Fabulous Gold in Brazilian Jungles

(Copyright, 1931, by United Press)

San Francisco, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Three airplane expeditions, one of them headed by Douglas Fairbanks, will begin a race within two months in an attempt to find fabulously rich gold deposits in the almost impenetrable jungles of Brazil, the United Press was reliably informed today.

Fairbanks has financed and will head one expedition; John E. Mitchell, said to be a cousin of Gen. William "Billy" Mitchell, is already in Rio De Janeiro with two planes, and Robert Hancock, San Francisco aviator, will lead the third, according to the United Press informant.

No information was available as to whether Miss Pickford will accompany her husband.

Mitchell's expedition has been organized, and he is now negotiating with the government of Brazil for permission to begin the treasure hunt.

Hancock, 43-year-old former automobile racing driver and expert pilot, had received backing from a Pacific coast financier whose name he withheld.

Hancock will be accompanied by Jay Wilson, mining engineer, formerly of Alaska, in an effort to locate the mother lode of South America's gold.

Naturally secretive as to the source of his information, but stating he had talked with several persons recently returned from the jungles of Goyaz, Hancock was frank in his expectation that tremendous wealth awaits the first, and possible all three, of the expeditions.

Hancock's objective lies in the state of Goyaz, 13 degrees south of the equator. The country he seeks is mostly open, with scrubby arboreal growth. The picture, actor, while reputedly not needing the money, in real life is an adventuresome character as his many film roles indicate.

Confesses to Setting Fire to Buildings

Cushing, Minn., Nov. 7.—(UP)—County authorities today claimed they had obtained a confession from Elmer E. Sandeen that he had set fire to four buildings in this region during the last three years.

Sandeen is believed to be the "mysterious Cushing firebug" who has set half a dozen fires recently, authorities said. Sandeen was arrested after his own house was set afire last week in an effort to divert suspicion from himself, authorities said.

DEMO PARTY LOSES STAUNCH SUPPORTER IN CARAWAY'S DEATH

SUDDEN DEATH OF FIERY ARKANSAS SENATOR STUNS THE NATION

Washington, Oct. 7.—(UP)—The sudden death of Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway in Little Rock, Ark., last night removes from congress one of its most colorful figures and ablest democrats. His passing was mourned by his colleagues who paid tribute to him as a statesman and conscientious public servant.

Quick-witted and sharp of tongue, Caraway seldom overlooked an opportunity to engage in the rough-and-tumble conflict of debate during his two terms as senator and four terms in the house. He was one of the bitterest critics of the present administration.

Caraway is perhaps remembered here best for his sharp questioning of lobbyists during the senate lobby committee investigation of 1930, and in the fight for federal drought relief. Even after democratic leaders had agreed to a compromise with the administration on relief, Caraway fought to have the government make direct loans for food to the people of Arkansas whose crops had been destroyed by the blighting heat of the previous summer.

It is expected the governor of Arkansas will appoint a democrat to succeed Caraway before congress meets. His death and that of Dwight W. Morrow of New Jersey leaves the lineup in the senate as follows:

Republicans, 47; democrats, 46; farmer-labor, 1; vacancies, 2. Caraway's political career began with his election as prosecuting attorney in the second judicial circuit of Arkansas. He held this post for two terms, after which he was elected to congress. He had been in the senate since 1921.

Vice President Charles Curtis and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, opposing candidates for vice president in 1928, were placed in joint charge of the funeral by Mrs. Caraway. Curtis will select a delegation of senators and congressmen to represent the federal government. Robinson will complete all other arrangements.

Recovery of Silver Emphasizes Bolstering of Business Spirits

New York, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Soaring commodity and security prices that added theoretical millions of dollars to the purchasing power of the American public bolstered business spirits this week.

In fact, some sections of the country benefitting from the rise in agricultural prices were sure that prosperity was on its way and celebrated accordingly. This feeling was most pronounced in the southwest which has had its additional wheat income augmented by a sweeping advance in crude oil prices.

Economists recalled that the long march back to prosperity in 1921 was led by the advance in silver and cotton prices; some were sure this week that the recovery from the present depression would be led by silver and wheat. At any rate, a feeling of greater hopefulness spread throughout the country and many leaders were of the opinion that conditions were better than at any time since late spring.

Holiday purchases and cool weather needs spurred retail trade, heavy demand coming into shoes, clothes, furs and woolen goods.

The consuming public will shortly begin to draw upon its accumulated "Christmas club" bank deposits estimated at more than $500,000,000. Mutual savings banks in New York city alone will begin paying out next month a total of $36,579,189, slightly in excess of a year ago. Total payments by all banks last year was $632,000,000. This figure may not be exceeded this year.

These large sums, however, shrink into insignificance when compared with the sweeping advance in prices of various stocks, bonds and commodities. Appreciation in stocks and bonds from the October 5 low now amounts to more than $10,000,000,000; silver in the world more than $1,000,000,000 from its February low and grains $750,000,000 from their bear market lows of October.

Most impressive is the recovery in silver which directly affects the purchasing power of half the world's population. Higher silver will allow China and other silver standard countries to purchase American cotton and wheat, which in turn will bolster prices of these articles. Already the higher grain prices have provided for the thawing out of hopelessly frozen assets of many banks in the farm belt.

First quarter—Minnesota won the toss and Somers returned Marvill's kick 30 yards to the Northwestern 49-yard line. On a spinner play Manders went to the 17-yard line. After gaining two yards Manders spun around and went twelve yards for a touchdown. His kick for goal was good. Score: Minnesota 7; Northwestern 0.

Manders' kickoff was returned to the 33-yard line. Three line plays lost Northwestern five yards and Olson punted. Lewis replaced Moore at quarterback for the Wildcats. Neither team was able to make consistent gains and resorted to punts. A fifteen yard penalty for holding on the Gophers placed the ball on Minnesota's 1-yard line. Munn kicked out of danger. Northwestern kicked to Somers who went to the 34-yard line. The quarter ended with Minnesota hammering the Northwestern line and putting the ball on the two yard line.

Score, first quarter: Minnesota 7; Northwestern 0. On the first play of the second quarter, Manders went over for the second touchdown. Minnesota 14; Northwestern 0.

Near the close of the second quarter, Northwestern registered a touchdown. Minnesota 14; Northwestern 7. Third quarter: Minnesota 14; Northwestern 13.

NEARLY TWO MILLIONS LOPPED OFF COUNTY, TOWNSHIP BUDGETS IN MINNESOTA THRU CONCERTED ACTION FOR REDUCED TAXES

CROW WING SHOWS $13,828 SLICE IN NEXT YEAR'S LEVY

FORMAL REPORT REVEALING TOTAL REDUCTION MADE BY TAXPAYERS ASS'N HEAD

St. Paul, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Revolving taxpayers of Minnesota, led by farming communities' organizations, have cut nearly $2,000,000 off levies for next year.

J. F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Taxpayers' association, today made a formal report revealing that a total reduction of $1,858,939 had been made this year in 72 of the state's 87 counties. Township levies have been reduced more than a million and a half dollars, the report said.

Included in the list of counties which reduced tax levies and the aggregate amount this year were:

Crow Wing, $13,828; Clay, $33,751; Goodhue, $47,280; Morrison, $2,618; Rice, $7,302; Stearns, $51,000; Washington, $29,408.

Included in the list of township levy reductions were:

Clay, $9,802; Crow Wing, $4,829;

Goodhue, $26,350; Morrison, $14,846; Olmsted, $13,000; Rice, $3,882; Stearns, $23,190; Washington, $13,644.

Reed laid plans for another week of organization of county taxpayers associations in an effort to cut county, township and school district levies.

Three resolutions passed by the Meeker County Taxpayers association at a meeting in Litchfield at which Reed spoke were pointed out today as the answer to a defense of the county agent and home demonstration worker system made by D. W. Peck, director of extension work of the state.

OLSON CHAGRINED BY PLAN'S FAILURE TO GAIN SUPPORT

AGREE THAT FARMERS NEED AID BUT DIFFER AS TO HOW TO ACCOMPLISH IT

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7.—(UP)—Minnesota's overwhelmingly republican congressional delegation and Gov. Floyd B. Olson, the state's first farmer-labor chief executive, today agreed that something should be done to aid farmers, but they differed on how to do it.

The congressmen conferred all day yesterday with Olson on his proposals for farm relief. The governor several weeks ago announced his proposal which included federal aid and lower taxes.

Minnesota's representatives will go back to Washington to work for tariff changes to curtail importation of butter from Canada and Europe. The congressmen favored lower taxes although some of them did not approve of a replacement income tax as advocated by the governor in his statements to farm leaders. They did not give their approval to Olson's suggestion of exempting the small farm owner and home owner from the full rate of taxes.

Political observers said that the governor's move in calling the delegation together had furnished him with ammunition for an attack on republicans. Republicans control the state's congressional delegation and by failing to co-operate with the governor in his proposals for lower taxes and farm relief, they have left themselves open to attack by the farmer-laborites in the next gubernatorial campaign.

The governor was disappointed, it was understood, that the congressmen had not supported his plan.

ABDUCTORS DEMAND $25000 FOR RELEASE OF ST. LOUIS MAN

St. Louis, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Alexander Berg, 57, wealthy president of the Hill Brothers Fur Company was believed in the hands of kidnapers today, while police searched the city and suburban districts for traces of him.

Police announced that a note demanding $25,000 ransom was received by his wife today. The method used in delivering the note was not revealed nor was it learned whether the communication included instructions for delivering the money.

According to Albert Pike, Berg's chauffeur, two gunmen climbed into the Berg automobile on one of the busiest thoroughfares during the evening rush at six o'clock last night. The men climbed into the car as it made a stop for a stop-and-go light.

Berg and his chauffeur were forced to drive to an isolated district in St. Louis county north of the city, where Pike was told to get out, walk up the road and come back in five minutes and he would find the machine.

About 8 o'clock an anonymous telephone caller communicated with Mrs. Gertrude Berg and told her that her husband was being held for ransom and that she should not worry. The caller added that she would receive a note this morning instructing her how to arrange her husband's release.

Mrs. Berg was on the verge of a breakdown today and was ordered to be by a physician in her suite at the fashionable Park Plaza hotel.

The hotel, where the Bergs live, is only one block from exclusive Portland Place, and the home of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, kidnaped last April.

GOVERNOR TO ARGUE CASE DEFENDING HIS OWN POLICIES

OLSON TO APPEAR AS ATTORNEY IN SUIT OF ROAD CONTRACTING FIRM

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7.—(UP)—For the first time in the history of the state, the governor will appear as an attorney in court to defend one of his own policies which is the subject of a court action.

Today representatives of the attorney general's office obtained a postponement of the suit of a road contracting firm against the state until next Saturday. At that time Governor Floyd B. Olson will appear in court, technically as an intervenor, to explain why his 45 cents an hour minimum highway wage scale is legal.

Although Attorney General Henry N. Benson must defend the case, Governor Olson, whose work as Hennepin county attorney brought him the governorship, has announced that he will argue the merits of the state's case.

The company bringing the suit is the R. E. Fraser Co. of Fairbault which offered a bid on a stretch of highway paving without including the minimum wage specifications. Under Governor Olson's highway code, contractors must accept state contracts with a provision that the minimum wage paid highway workers be 45 cents an hour.

Thrifty Housewives See Economical Yet Tasty Thanksgiving Feast as Turkey Price Dwindles

Cuero, Texas, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Today was execution day in Texas.

The condemned had been fed their last hearty meal as the first of 160,000 Thanksgiving turkeys to be shipped from this area alone dolefully gobbled their way to the execution block.

There was no proud parade of plumage to the blare of brass bands as formerly. The annual Cuero "turkey trot" was called off this year, but the opening of the Thanksgiving market tomorrow was hailed by nearly 5,000 unemployed who will be given work during the turkey season.

Texas' turkey crop is seven per cent larger this year than last season, according to the agricultural bureau in Austin. About 1,400 carloads will be shipped out of Texas, bringing approximately $6,500,000 to growers, according to predicted prices.

The holiday bird that graces a groaning dining table in the east Thanksgiving day will cost the consumer between four and six cents less per pound than last year. Prices are expected to vary from 25 to 23 cents per pound.

BRIAND DEMANDS FIGHTING CEASE IN MANCHURIAN AREA

NEW MANCHURIAN INDEPENDENCE MOVEMENT IS REPORTED UNDER WAY

Washington, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Suggestions from Geneva that withdrawal of diplomatic representatives from Tokyo may be considered when the League of Nations council meets in Paris Nov. 16 to consider the Manchurian crisis are up to Japan's government and army gravity of the conflict in the Orient.

The United States has not been approached regarding this suggestion. It was understood, and pending overtures officials were reluctant to discuss the possibility of such action. There was some doubt among observers, however, as to whether the administration would favor a withdrawal of its ambassador at Tokyo, as this would be a step approaching a breaking off of relations.

Geneva, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Aristide Briand, president of the League of Nations council, sent another strongly worded note to Japan and China today insisting that they cease military activities in Manchuria.

At the same time the council definitely set its next meeting for Nov. 16 at Paris when it will consider every method of restoring peace in Manchuria if the situation has not improved by then.

Briand also sent a note to Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese representative on the council, insisting that salt revenue seizures in Manchuria was calculated to aggravate the situation.

Briand insisted that the Japanese and Chinese governments instruct their army commanders immediately to take the necessary steps to prevent conflicts in the disturbed area.

The league has been gravely alarmed by the fighting along the Nonni river. It is studying the possibility of applying pressure to halt the warfare, either by withdrawal of the diplomatic representatives of world powers or by economic sanctions.

In asking for assurances against further fighting in Manchuria, Briand said the league's "anxiety" was greatly increased and added that another serious fight would greatly handicap the peace efforts.

Dairen, Manchuria, Nov. 7.—(UP)—A new Manchurian independence movement, one of many inspired by the present Sino-Japanese controversy, was started today by the Manchurian Prince Kung.

Prince Kung, once a wealthy member of an old imperial Chinese family who has been living here under Japanese protection for many years, announced he had appointed a committee of 15 to "prepare to establish a new government" in Manchuria.

St. Paul, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Revolting taxpayers of Minnesota, led by farming communities' organizations, have cut nearly $2,000,000 off levies for next year.

J. F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Taxpayers' association, today made a formal report revealing that a total reduction of $1,858,939 had been made this year in 72 of the state's 87 counties. Township levies have been reduced more than a million and a half dollars, the report said.

Included in the list of counties which reduced tax levies and the aggregate amount this year were:

Crow Wing, $13,828; Clay, $33,751; Goodhue, $47,280; Morrison, $2,618; Rice, $7,302; Stearns, $51,000; Washington, $29,403.

OLSON TO APPEAR AS ATTORNEY IN SUIT OF ROAD CONTRACTING FIRM

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7.—(UP)—For the first time in the history of the state, the governor will appear as an attorney in court to defend one of his own policies which is the subject of a court action.

Today representatives of the attorney general's office obtained a postponement of the suit of a road contracting firm against the state until next Saturday. At that time Governor Floyd B. Olson will appear in court, technically as an intervenor, to explain why his 45 cents an hour minimum highway wage scale is legal.

Although Attorney General Henry N. Benson must defend the case, Governor Olson, whose work as Hennepin county attorney brought him the governorship, has announced that he will argue the merits of the state's case. The company bringing the suit is the R. B. Fraser Co. of Fairbault which offered a bid on a stretch of highway paving without including the minimum wage specifications. Under Governor Olson's highway code, contractors must accept state contracts with a provision that the minimum wage paid highway workers be 45 cents an hour.

Thrifty Housewives See Economical Yet Tasty Thanksgiving Feast as Turkey Price Dwindles

Cuero, Texas, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Today was execution day in Texas.

The condemned had been fed their last hearty meal as the first of 160,000 Thanksgiving turkeys to be shipped from this area alone dolefully gobbled their way to the execution block.

There was no proud parade of plumage to the blare of brass bands as formerly. The annual Cuero "turkey trot" was called off this year, but the opening of the Thanksgiving market tomorrow was hailed by nearly 5,000 unemployed who will be given work during the turkey season.

Texas' turkey crop is seven per cent larger this year than last season, according to the agricultural bureau in Austin. About 1,400 carloads will be shipped out of Texas, bringing approximately $6,500,000 to growers, according to predicted prices.

The holiday bird that graces a groaning dining table in the east Thanksgiving day will cost the consumer between four and six cents less per pound than last year. Prices are expected to vary from 25 to 23 cents per pound.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—(UP)—Thirty Chicago housewives this year may cook their Thanksgiving dinners—from roast turkey and cranberries through to pumpkin pie—at nearly one-fourth less cost than last year, it appeared today.

Last year they were 45 cents at this time.

BRIAND DEMANDS FIGHTING CEASE IN MANCHURIAN AREA

NEW MANCHURIAN INDEPENDENCE MOVEMENT IS REPORTED UNDER WAY

Washington, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Suggestions from Geneva that withdrawal of diplomatic representatives from Tokio may be considered when the League of Nations council meets in Paris Nov. 18 to consider the Manchurian crisis, up to now, seemed a mere gravity of the conflict in the Orient.

The United States has not been approached regarding this suggestion. It was understood, and pending overtures officials were reluctant to discuss the possibility of such action. There was some doubt among observers, however, as to whether the administration would favor a withdrawal of its ambassador at Tokio, as this would be a step approaching a breaking off of relations.

Geneva, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Aristide Briand, president of the League of Nations council, sent another strongly worded note to Japan and China today insisting that they cease military activities in Manchuria.

Geneva, Nov. 7.—(UP)—The Soviet Union today denied the right of the League of Nations to publish statistics on Russian armaments.

Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, sent a note to Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general of the league, saying the Soviet would not consent to publication of arms records which the league had asked submitted in preparation for the 1932 world disarmament conference.

At the same time the council definitely set its next meeting for Nov. 18 at Paris when it will consider every method of restoring peace in Manchuria if the situation has not improved by then.

Briand also sent a note to Kenkichi Yoshizawa, Japanese representative on the council, insisting that salt revenue seizures in Manchuria was calculated to aggravate the situation. Briand insisted that the Japanese and Chinese governments instruct their army commanders immediately to take the necessary steps to prevent conflicts in the disturbed area.

The league has been gravely alarmed by the fighting along the Nonal river. It is studying the possibility of applying pressure to halt the warfare, either by withdrawal of the diplomatic representatives of world powers or by economic sanctions.

In asking for assurances against further fighting in Manchuria, Briand said the league's "anxiety" was greatly increased and added that another serious fight would greatly handicap the peace efforts.

Dairen, Manchuria, Nov. 7.—(UP)—A new Manchurian independence movement, one of many inspired by the present Sino-Japanese controversy, was started today by the Manchou Prince Kung. Prince Kung, once wealthy member of an old imperial Chinese family who has been living here under Japanese protection for many years, announced he had appointed a committee of 15 to "prepare to establish a new government" in Manchuria.

SOUTH SIDE NIGHT FIRE DOES $1,000 DAMAGE; INSURED

JOHN O'GRADY FAMILY FLEE HOME CARRYING OUT FURNITURE

Fire Chief Frank W. Fuller today estimated the damage by fire to a house and two sheds in south Brainerd last night at $1,000 and learned that the majority of the loss is covered by insurance.

The fire broke out from unknown cause in the shed to the rear of the home, 507 South 5th street, owned by the Inez Weston estate. Flames spread to the home and then to a shed owned by Hans Anderson, 502 Norwood street.

Receiving the alarm at 12:45 a. m., 22 firemen fought the fire for an hour and a half. A number of Brainerd people saw the blaze light the sky and were attracted to the fire.

Art Fricker, post office employee, awakened the John O'Grady family who occupied the home. They had ample time to dress and leave the building, carrying articles of furniture with them.

Firemen confined the fire chiefly to the attic of the dwelling but water and smoke did considerable damage to the remaining rooms.

ASKS LADIES HERE TO BUDGET TIME TO INCLUDE LEAGUE WOMEN VOTERS WORK

By MRS. W. C. COBB

The League of Women Voters' tea held at the home of Mrs. E. O. Webb Friday afternoon was one of the most attractive events of the social season. Shaded lights and candles furnished a subdued light for a picture which focused on a richly appointed tea table with cloth of lace and a low, artistically arranged centerpiece of Japanese lanterns and bright berries, defined by tall candles in silver candelabra.

The tea was to honor the state president, Miss Ruth Mitchell and Mrs. J. M. Dobson, state Legal Status chairman, both of St. Cloud.

Mrs. Dobson reported on the practical workings of the bill passed by the last legislature requiring a five day waiting period between the application for and granting of a marriage license. She stated that, although the bill became effective as soon as passed, there had been comparatively few "waivers" granted. Provision was made in the bill for exceptions to the five day period, these "waivers" to be granted at the discretion of the judge. The women who reviewed these exceptions considered the reasons valid ones in practically every case.

She stated that the original bill required publication of the application, which would give parents and social workers time to prepare objections in case the marriage should not take place. In order to get the bill through, it was necessary to drop this requirement, but Mrs. Dobson stated that the practice of publishing such applications was followed pretty generally—except in the border cities.

The committee on Legal Status will watch the practical application of this law and be ready to suggest amendments to the next legislature, if necessary.

Another measure on the Legal Status program is the extension of jury service for women. Although the unfortunate occurrence in the Fosbury trial had made women jurors unpopular for the moment, the speaker ventured the opinion that when the whole truth came out there would be others to share the guilt. "Besides," said Mrs. Dobson, "there have been many culpable men jurors in the history of our jury system, but the system still survives."

The two subjects for study this year were announced to be "Marriage Laws and Customs" and "Legal Disabilities of Women." The slogan of the league, she stated, was "A separate bill for every ill"—instead of a blanket bill that would wipe out both good and bad laws.

After a charming introduction by the president of the local league, Mrs. M. W. Richards, Miss Mitchell gave a friendly, informal talk that came straight from her heart. She told of the thrill she felt when she realized what the League of Women Voters might do for women. Then, after reading a fine tribute to the work of the league from President Hoover, she gave several reasons why it was worth while for women to so carefully budget their time as to leave a place on their weekly program for league work.

Among these reasons was individual development afforded by the study program of the League. She said that study as a preparation for action was so much more interesting, more vital, than study for the mere purpose of storing up facts.

Another reason was the feeling of good fellowship, of "camaraderie," it gave members to be working together for common ends. She stated that this was no doubt true of every organization but particularly so of the League because every subject was so thoroughly studied, so carefully thought out before it was placed on the program for legislative action. But once on that program, they never gave up no matter how many times a bill failed. A failure simply meant more work and better methods. Political wisdom has taught the necessity for infinite patience and perseverance when working for social legislation.

"League work is never static—it is always dynamic," said the speaker, "as soon as one fight is won, another is begun."

After each talk, eager and pertinent questions showed the interest of the audience until discussion was cut short by the presentation of the petition the League is sending to the next Disarmament Conference.

Then the meeting adjourned to the dining room, where dainty refreshments were served. The "cup that cheers" was poured by Mesdames M. W. Richards and F. E. Stout.

Plans Air League of School Students

Pittsburgh, Pa. — The Air Travel League of America, with headquarters here, is to attempt the establishment of branches in schools throughout the country in order to teach students the fundamentals of aviation, facts about the growth of air transportation, and the value and limitations of planes as commercial carriers.

James E. Mooney, nationally known lecturer and author of aviation textbooks, is president of the league, and one of its honorary members is Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania.

"The league will attempt to give students an intelligent and constructive evaluation of the vocational possibilities of aviation," Mooney explains. "School officials, systems and organizations all over the country are being invited to join the movement. A consultation service will be maintained for benefit of league members."

Palace of Fashion

Fashion exhibitions have been held frequently here, but they have been for the most part up-to-date fashions. Now Paris is planning a permanent museum of fashions, which will exhibit in a display consisting of more than 1,700 dresses, every change of fashion that has taken place through the past several hundred years.

LEFT HERE 22 YEARS AGO; MRS. FRED OTT, BRAINERD, IS A DAUGHTER

The death of Fred Norton, 83 years old, at Portland, Ore., was learned here today by relatives and friends in Brainerd who recall him as a pioneer of this city.

Norton came to Brainerd in his youth from Belgium. Later he purchased the Ott farm at Barrows. He moved to Portland about 22 years ago.

Surviving besides his widow Mrs. Esther Norton, Portland, formerly of Brainerd are the following daughters and sons, Mrs. Fred Ott, Brainerd; James E. Norton, Seattle, Wash.; Charles L. Norton, Vancouver, Wash.; Mrs. E. H. Berland and Mrs. Abbe John, Portland; also eight grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Special Armistice Services at Methodist Church

Rev. F. A. Kufus, pastor of the Methodist church, will speak at 11 o'clock Sunday morning at the regular service on "War—the Arch Demon," in a program commemorating Armistice Day.

Special music by the choir under the direction of Mrs. A. W. Moulster will be heard at both the morning and evening services.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Meschke of Brainerd have moved to Midland. They are having some repairing done to the inside of the house.

Frederick and Elmer Lingwall, Harry Scott and Emil Hanson are building a cottage near the Barnard school house.

Mrs. G. W. Hill, Faye and Buster, and Mrs. Parry Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. McCalvey were dinner guests at the home of Earl Borden Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Emory Scott of Brainerd were calling on relatives at Garrison Sunday and Monday.

Perry Borden had the misfortune to have his valuable bird dog, Peggy, accidentally shot and killed the last day of duck season.

Supper guests at the home of Ed. Moon Friday evening were Luella and Buster Hill.

Mrs. Lloyd Benjamin went to Brainerd Monday to have some dental work done.

Little Cleo Thompson and Jackie Dike gave their folks quite a scare Sunday. They decided to call on Mrs. Swan Melstrom, five miles below Garrison, and walked down there without telling any one where they were going. They were not located until after dark.

Several of the boys have taken advantage of the whitish season and are catching a few.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Scott called at Geo. Hill's home Saturday evening.

The play "Two Days to Marry" given by home talent at the Neutral school house Friday evening was a great success. But during the evening one of the benches fell down breaking Jim Van Winkle's and Jim Coffield's legs. The same play will be given at the Borden Lake school house Nov. 5.

Friday evening Buster Hill had car trouble and had to have his car towed home from the "seven mile corner." He drives the high school bus between Garrison and Brainerd.

Doris Dinwiddie was an overnight guest at the home of Florence Jones two nights last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Parry Borden and Mrs. F. Metzger made a business trip to Brainerd Monday.

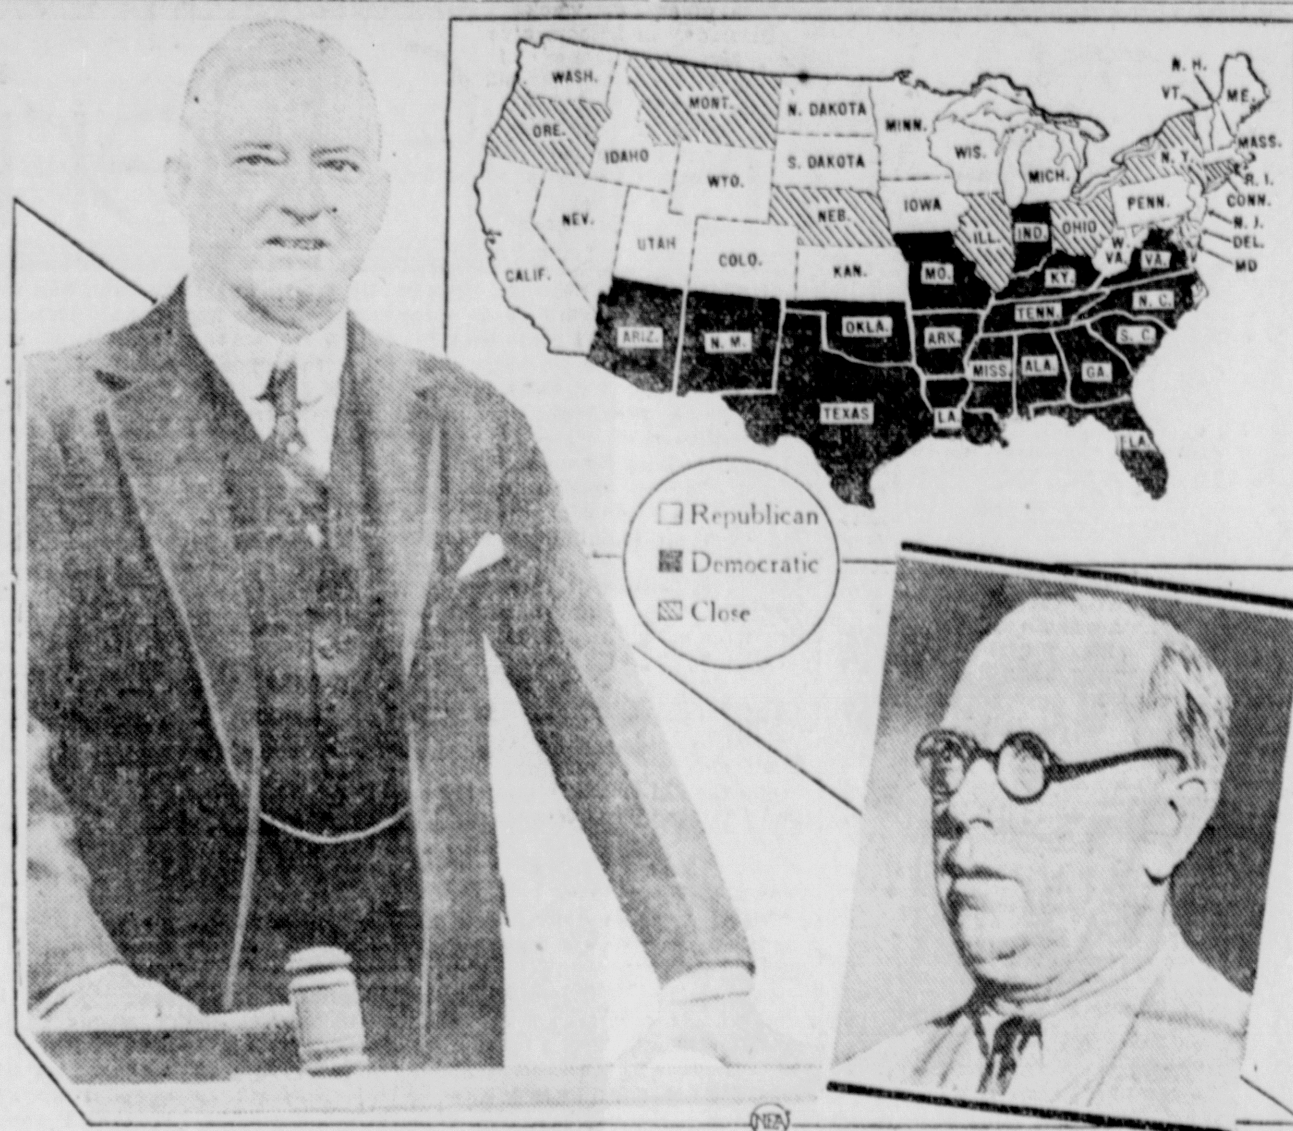

Earl Hallstead and a friend have gone to the north country to trap this winter. Jake Dinwiddie took them.

Miss Pearl Boles is a guest at the home of Charlie Jones for a few days. Miss Marvel Jesom was a caller at the home of Bert Scott's Sunday.

Church bells are tuned by chipping the edge until the proper note is obtained.

Garner Looms as Speaker as Democrats Win Congress

Meet the probable Democratic speaker of the new congress, Representative Jack Garner of Texas, and also meet the Democratic member whose election appears to have clinched Garner's choice by giving the party a majority! Garner, long the Democratic floor leader in the House of Representatives, is shown at the left in a remarkable composite photograph. At the right is Congressman-elect Michael Hart of Saginaw, Mich., first Democrat elected from his district in 32 years, whose victory—according to the statisticians—made the count 217 Democrats 215 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborer. The map shows how the new Congress, convening Dec. 7, will be made up. The black states are those where Democratic members predominate, the white states where Republican members predominate, the shaded states where the division is close.

File Suit Demanding Return of Sum to State

Grand Rapids, Minn., Nov. 6.—(UP)—Suit was filed today in Itasca county court against Mrs. Rosanna C. Payne, Balchub, state representative, demanding return to the state of $342.

The civil action, filed by Attorney General Henry N. Benson, charged her with presenting a false claim to the state Soldiers Home board by which she obtained that sum.

The action was instituted at the request of State Comptroller E. J. Pearlove. Mrs. Payne claims she obtained the money from the board to pay her for groceries delivered to Mrs. Susan Wilson, widow of a Spanish-American war veteran.

50 Years of Efficient Performance

Since Industry Was Young

Fifty years ago, industry as we know it today, was but an infant. We served that infant and helped nurture it to its present size. For fifty years we have been ministering to the needs of business and to the services of the individual. Each of those fifty years has presented a new problem. Each of the years to come will present another. But the spirit and ability that carried us through fifty varied and sometimes difficult years will aid us—and you—to fifty more years of protection and safety.

Gravel Roads Improve in Favorable Weather; New Pavements Opened

All of the new pavement built on the trunk highways this year is now open to traffic, according to the weekly road condition report issued by the Minnesota Highway department today. The last job, T. H. No. 57, Mantorville to Kasson, was opened this week.

Gravel roads generally are better than a week ago, due to favorable weather. A few places where construction is in progress are reported poor.

All routes are reported in normal condition except the following:

- T. H. No. 1—Cross River to Lutsen, construction, poor in wet weather.
- T. H. No. 2—Carlton to McGregor, gravel detours, some bad spots; Atkinson to Brainerd, bituminous detour via Garrison; Frazee to Detroit Lakes, part new grade, graveling.
- T. H. No. 3—Alexandria to Garfield, gravel detour.
- T. H. No. 4—Long Prairie to Clarissa, gravel detour.
- T. H. No. 7—Winona to Stockton, gravel detour; Springfield to T. H. No. 4, new gravel; T. H. No. 4 to Walnut Grove, gravel detour.
- T. H. No. 8—Short detours east and west of Bagley.
- T. H. No. 8—Spring Valley to Austin, gravel detour; Albert Lea to Banks, gravel detour; west of Banks, short detour.
- T. H. No. 12—Montevideo to Dawson, gravel detour.
- T. H. No. 13—Near Waterville, short wet weather detour.
- T. H. No. 14—West of Marshall, 5 mi. gravel detour.
- T. H. No. 15—Searles to New Ulm, gravel detour.
- T. H. No. 17—Fulda to Slayton, new gravel.

File Suit Demanding Return of Sum to State

Grand Rapids, Minn., Nov. 6.—(UP)—Suit was filed today in Itasca county court against Mrs. Rosanna C. Payne, Bullehub, state representative, demanding return to the state of $342.

The civil action, filed by Attorney General Henry N. Benson, charged her with presenting a false claim to the state Soldiers Home board by which she obtained that sum.

The action was instituted at the request of State comptroller E. J. Pearlove. Mrs. Payne claims she obtained the money from the board to pay her for groceries delivered to Mrs. Susan Wilson, widow of a Spanish-American war veteran.

COUNTY GIVES $100 TO FLOWER SOCIETY IF DONATION LEGAL

WOULD BE TURNED OVER IN SPRING FOR PREMIUMS IN SHOWS

The County Board of Commissioners today voted to donate to the Crow Wing County Garden and Flower Society $100 if the contribution will pass legal censor.

If the appropriation of county funds for this purpose is declared legal by County Attorney A. J. Sullivan, the money will be turned over to the society in the spring. It will be used to aid in financing premiums for flower shows here.

Laval an Inveterate Cigarette Smoker

The cigarette is almost a part of Laval according to Washingtonians who met the French Premier. A prominent member of the Colony said:

"There are two things which immediately strike one about Laval—his white tie and his inevitable cigarette. The white tie is worn everywhere and with every conceivable costume. The cigarette is almost as much a part of him."

"At a lunch on board the Ile-de-France, correspondents proffered their cigarettes to the Premier."

"Attendez un instant" (wait a moment), said Laval. "I smoke American cigarettes myself."

"He produced his own package of cigarettes—Old Golds. This is a brand which is not sold in France to any great extent."

"He smoked 37 cigarettes here in one afternoon, at a reception, during a press conference and at a tea."

Bert Scott Building New Cottage on Borden Lake

Friends will regret to learn that Mrs. Clarence May is ill at her home on Miller Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Frayer are visiting at Mrs. Frayer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Harrison.

Mrs. Ed Moon and son Howard and daughter Edna were callers at George Hill's Wednesday evening.

Bert Scott is erecting a new cottage on Borden Lake.

Mrs. Gillen was a guest at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cluff Knowlen Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Mae Dike's mother, Mrs. Morning passed away Tuesday morning after a lingering illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Francis left Friday for their home in Montana after visiting several weeks at the J. N. Francis home on East Round Lake.

50 Years of Efficient Performance

Since Industry Was Young

Fifty years ago, industry as we know it today, was but an infant. We served that infant and helped nurture it to its present size. For fifty years we have been ministering to the needs of business and to the services of the individual. Each of those fifty years has presented a new problem. Each of the years to come will present another. But the spirit and ability that carried us through fifty varied and sometimes difficult years will aid us—and you—to fifty more years of protection and safety.

THAT MARRIED WOMEN EMPLOYMENT QUESTION--

A refreshing thought in the problem of whether or not married women should be given positions or should hold their present ones was struck in a letter to the editor of The Daily Dispatch on this pertinent subject appearing in Friday's edition.

"I believe it to be a strictly moral question with the person involved and it should be weighed by every married woman in our community," the letter reads. This is placing the responsibility on the key to the entire situation.

Continuing, the letter says that this also applies to city as well as county administrations in addition to business houses. "It surely is not conducive to good citizenship to see both sides of the household employed and some other poor devil go hungry for the want of employment," to quote the letter.

In conclusion, the writer of the letter believes that this community should apply the same tactics in Brainerd as they have in other towns; in Ramsey county for instance, the letter states. Tactics referred to included requests for the resignation of every married woman in order to give their positions to some others who needed it most. Others of a more charitable nature, the letter concludes, resigned of their own free will.

There is little use in trying to sidestep the question of employment of married women. It crops up daily and constantly is demanding more consideration. Of course, there are exceptions to every rule. Likewise, there are times when a married woman justifies her position; she is the bread winner of the family and has someone dependent upon her. It is easy to overlook this phase.

REPAIR THE STREETS--

It is high time that work is being done on the unpaved streets of Brainerd. They have become in bad need of repair and, only through a break in the weather now, will it be possible to put all into shape before the winter sets in.

Three days' work with the county grader was contracted for by the city council at its last meeting. It is imperative that this work be done at once. And, it is unfortunate that the city is not in a position to keep its own grader in condition so that it would be available at all times.

ORIGIN OF "ITASCA" A MYSTERY--

Just where Henry R. Schoolcraft got the name that he gave to the source of the Mississippi in 1832 has always been somewhat of a mystery. Traders had long known it as "Lac la Biche" or Elk Lake. The commonly accepted explanation is based on a letter written in 1872 by William T. Boutwell, the missionary, who accompanied the expedition of 1832. From this it would appear that Schoolcraft combined syllables of the Latin words "veritas," truth, and "caput," head,—suggested by Boutwell,—to form "Itasca."

Another possible explanation of the name has recently come to light. In one of two "Itasca Studies" in the September issue of the quarterly magazine of the Minnesota Historical society, attention is called to a government report by Schoolcraft, written at least seventeen years before Boutwell's letter, which indicates that the name was coined by Schoolcraft himself from terms of Indian origin.

CONSERVATIVE ENGLAND--

The thundering crash with which England's voters crushed the Labor party's strength in Parliament may mean a number of things, and will probably keep the wisecracks busy explaining and analyzing for a while.

A large part of it, undoubtedly, is simply due to the voter's traditional reaction against the party in power when times are hard. Those riots we read about in English cities during the weeks preceding the election spoke of a deep and abiding discontent; this discontent, expressing itself in ballots, knocked the country's so-called Socialist government clear out of the window.

But the most interesting thing about it is the way in which this discontent expressed itself.

Usually a nation that finds the going unendurably rough speaks its mind by calling in the radicals and giving them a chance to try out some of their panaceas. England did just the reverse. Instead of hauling off and breaking up the available china, she called in the Tories. Instead of heading farther toward Socialism, she went completely conservative.

This, perhaps, represents something more than just the regular vote again the government. It might not be stretching things to say that old England is giving the ancient, established ruling class one more chance.

Although few man-made institutions possess more stamina than the British empire, there is no denying that things in England today are in an extremely bad way. Trade has fallen off, finances are amazingly wobbly, unemployment remains an unhealed wound, taxes are unbelievably high. But the English are not yet ready to call for a new form of government, or a new kind of economic and social set-up.

Instead, the class that built up the empire, made England the world's banker and made English merchants and ships the world's greatest traders is given the reins again. If it can fix things, well and good. And if not—

Well, it is possible to find grounds for believing that the world today stands at one of the turning points of history. England—if the Tories fail—may become one of the pivots on which the ranks of mankind turn to march in a new direction.

MacDONALD'S COURAGE--

There is one angle to the recent British election that has not quite received the attention it deserves.

Some time before the election, Premier Ramsay MacDonald was called on to choose between his personal ambition and his desire to serve his country. He chose the latter alternative, broke with Labor party leaders, and formed a species of coalition government. At the time, he realized that this might mean a complete wreck for his own career.

But in the election Mr. MacDonald scored a great victory. The voters appreciated his unselfish daring and told him so with ballots.

There is some sort of lesson in that for politicians on this side of the water. Might not the United States equally reward a leader who was consistently ready to serve the country without stopping to think about what it might cost him?

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Rich old MRS. JUPITER is robbed and murdered during the engagement party she gave for her secretary, MARY HARKNESS. The thief fails to get the famous Jupiter necklace. Suspicion points to Mary's brother, EDDIE, who is killed by a car as he goes to meet her. Police drop the case, leaving Eddie guilty. BOWEN, police reporter for the Star, conducts a private investigation. He discovers a footprint, croak called THE FLY to whom Eddie owed money. Eddie's coat, found in the house, is recognized by the killer as one worn by a "gate-crasher" he elected the night of the murder. Mary's father, DIRK RUTHER, believes Eddie guilty and forbids her to see Bowen, fearing further notoriety. They quarrel but make up and plan to marry at once. Mary meets Bowen in a speakeasy. DIRK proves THE FLY is not there. Mary clasps the necklace about her throat just as three strangers enter.

They leave, followed by Bowen, who fears an attempt on the necklace. DIRK does not. The two men quarrel. Just as DIRK locks up the necklace there is a crash in the street outside. Bowen tells the police. Bowen goes to the police station rather than overtake Mary and DIRK. DIRK still goes on about the existence of THE FLY and Mary goes off with Bowen.

GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXII

"YOU shouldn't have done that," Bowen objected. "Now how'll you get home?"

"I'm not going home just yet," Mary said. "You're going back to Shay's and get what fingerprints you can. Where are the ones you got off the fun?"

"In my hotel room," "I'll go there and wait for you. I don't feel equal to Shay's again, right now. Besides, it might be better if you went alone."

"I'll get kicked out anyway," Bowen muttered morosely. "Look," he said, "you better not do this. You better make it up with him while you can, or there's liable not to be any wedding tomorrow."

"There isn't going to be any how!" Mary flamed. "Until I find out who's right. If those fingerprints tally, there won't be any, anyway, until that man's caught. One thing at a time, and that comes first with me. If they don't—if you've just been giving me a—a cock-and-bull story—"

"Why should I do that?" "To get a sensational story."

"I haven't printed a line about you yet, have I?" "Then, if that isn't the reason, DIRK said you had another—" she turned several shades of pink in quick succession, but blurted it out nevertheless—"he said you were making up excuses for sticking around because—you were in love with me."

"I didn't faze Bowen," "I don't say I'm not," he gritted, looking straight ahead. "Oh, then—"

"Every blame word I've said is the truth, and you know it!" he cried bitterly. "And I'm tired of having my word doubted! I don't have to prove it. If you want to drop the matter, we'll drop it right here and now. It's entirely up to you. I hate the fly's gizzard, but I can let my feelings go. You're the one most concerned."

"Odd that it had never occurred to DIRK just that way!" "I'm going with you."

"Then come on." Bowen's hotel was just around the corner in a side-street, nearer Sixth than Fifth Avenue. It was not fashionable but clean and warm. Bowen bought some magazines at the lobby stand, and guided Mary gingerly by an elbow into a small, rose and gold room opening off the lobby.

An old woman in a soiled uniform limped forward.

"Hello, Kate," Bowen greeted her. "Take good care of this for me, will you? Till I come back."

Kate's eyes took in Mary from head to toe, with cynical interest. "Shure I will," she promised, with enthusiasm. Kate had executed commissions for newspapermen before. She would soon know what this beautiful damsel in distress had been up to. Shot her lover, perhaps. Whatever it was she'd been crying about, it thrilled Kate that she should know about it before it came out in tomorrow's papers.

MARY established herself on the shabby divan with Town and Tattle and fell to reading, more to escape the old woman's questioning than anything else. Eventually the old soul hobbled away, muttering to a self about the unpleasure of some people.

"When they get you in the jug, you'll talk, my fine girl," she threatened through the wall.

Mary read on, oblivious of having offended. It was rather fun making out who was meant by the people referred to in those small, scandalous paragraphs in the gossip magazine. No names were mentioned, of course, but it was usually made plain enough. This, for instance:

"Why is it that we never appreciate what we have until it is another's? What child of great wealth—a bud of three seasons ago—is making rather a fool of herself over a childhood sweetheart whose devotion she was wont to ridicule until he took unto himself a fiancée? She is said to be relying heavily on the fact that the said fiancée is involved in a messy family scandal just now, which only the immense wealth and political pull of her sponsor has succeeded in squelching."

A cold prickle began to creep over Mary, and she sat upright on the couch, realizing suddenly that it must be herself who was meant! Her eyes raced on:

"Both aspirants to the hand of the blue-blooded and personable young lawyer come to the post well equipped—the deb with this world's goods, and the fiancée with more than her share of looks. But if all Dame Rumor whispers is true, and the lucky girl's elderly sponsor makes legal and binding his promise to make her his heir, then the scales will tilt heavily in her favor, and she will be able to match her rival million for million, with a few extra for good measure."

"A curious outcome, indeed, in view of the fact that the elderly protector's own wife died under mysterious circumstances recently. But Croesus will hear no ill of his Cinderella, so they say."

Mary buried the magazine as far as she could throw it, and took a turn around the room to cool off. The impudence of it! The cowardliness!

The alert Katie looked in, but withdrew in affright before that terrible young face. Mary was still pacing restlessly about the room, from picture to picture, staring at the ugly old landscapes with unseeing eyes, spelling out artists' names with moving lips, forgetting them as she uttered them.

Bowen should take her home at once, and the matter would be put before Mr. Jupiter. He would know what to do. "Immense wealth and political pull" indeed! If that were so, then they should be made to feel it!

But as her anger cooled she knew with sickening certainty that in later showing it to Mr. Jupiter, she would keep it from him. After all, was it any more than had been common talk for weeks? Everyone knew it was a scurrilous little sheet; everyone discounted its nasty little digs. She would only make matters worse if she made a row about it.

BOWEN came hurrying in, his arms full of packages. In his left hand he held a whisky-bottle carefully by the neck.

"Sorry to be so long," he explained, "but I had to buy some powder and some other junk. . . . I got a pretty good thumb print, I think, but the rest are not so good. . . . I wanta wait here a little longer till I go up and develop this? I'll hurry. . . ."

"What's the bottle for?" Mary asked, bewildered.

"Don't touch it!" He drew it away from her pointing finger. "It's his—the fly's. He drinks a special brand. Mike sneaked it for me while Jack's back was turned. Let me get upstairs with it, quick, before something happens to it." He was laboring under strong excitement. "Can y' imagine it? I been carrying this down the street like this. Afraid to wrap it up and smear the print. Wonder I wasn't pinched." He started off, and Mary followed.

"Oh, don't leave me here! One more black mark on my reputation won't hurt. I'm going up with you." In the elevator she asked bitterly, "Did you know what was in that magazine you gave me?"

When they were out of hearing of an exotic-looking couple who were in the elevator with them she told him. Bowen did not seem impressed.

"Oh, who reads that lousy little sheet anyway? A handful of nit-wits with more money than brains, who know it anyhow, and about a million repressed schoolteachers who won't understand it after they read it. Forget it."

"Emily Ann Ruyther reads it," Mary said worriedly. "I suppose she's in the midst of a pink fit by now."

"Forget it! We'll have Emily Ann begging your pardon on bended knee before we're through."

He propped the door of his room open with a book, and laid his purchases out on the table, the precious bottle occupying an open space all its own. After that, they did not bother to talk. Bowen set to work and Mary watched, absorbed. The thumb print came up clearly, the others were, as he had said, too faint to be of much good.

Presently he raised a flushed, perspiring countenance and said dramatically, "Now!" He laid on the table the sheet of paper containing the fingerprints obtained from the gun. Beside it he placed a fingerprint chart and a magnifying glass. Occupying the place of honor stood the whisky-bottle, erect, its powder-blackened sides showing a variety of finger-smudges.

He bent his eye to the magnifying glass, moving it from one to the other, back and forth.

"I'm no expert," he said, at last, "but if those thumb-prints aren't identical, I'll eat 'em. I'll get an expert's opinion on it, if you want it. The boys in the identification bureau will do it for me."

"Do it, will you?" she asked eagerly. "I accept your word, but we must be absolutely certain."

"Right. Tomorrow, without fail. Well, Miss Sherlock Holmes, let's shut up shop for tonight."

He removed a pile of clean shirts from a dresser drawer, laid his exhibits carefully away in the empty drawer, locked it, and they went out.

"It's only 10 o'clock," he whispered in the elevator. "You'll be home and in beddy-bye in an hour. What could be sweeter? And don't worry, your boy-friend'll come around all right. Keep a stiff upper lip, and remember what you've got now to knock sense into him with—that whisky bottle!"

SHE didn't want to hear him talk about it. She was more grateful than she could ever say for the surety he had just given her. It made her course clear. But personally, he had become faintly repulsive to her. . . . that declaration of his was shocking, somehow, centered as her emotions were in DIRK, and DIRK only. Perhaps she drew away slightly; her feelings may have shown in her face.

"Listen, forget what I said a while ago, will you?" he said. "I ought not to have—but hell, you asked for it! And I know it doesn't make any difference to you."

"Oh, I'd forgotten all about it!" she assured him, surprised at his perception.

"They stepped out into the lobby. "Hungry?" he asked. "Better have a cup of coffee before you go. You look done up. Did you eat anything at Shay's?"

"Not much," she confessed and followed him, almost wobbling with faintness and weariness, to the grill, which was empty except for the couple they had seen in the elevator. Mary recognized them without more than a brief glance. The odor of the woman's oriental perfume was overpowering. The man with her was odd-looking, too—foreign, apparently. Such of their talk as drifted to her ears was in French, and his clothes sloppily worn, his hair thick and long below his large black felt hat. He wore a small waxed mustache.

Mary began to feel a peculiar uneasiness. She had been unconventional in going to that room, if anyone chose to be priggish about it. She would not have given it a second thought if it had not been for these exotic-looking people. Continental of that type always made her rush for safety to the ideals of her Puritan ancestors.

She drank hot coffee gratefully. Bowen did not talk much.

"I was supposed to cover a Red riot in Jersey City tonight," he observed. And added complacently, "The hell with it!" After that he did not talk at all.

The couple passed out of the room just ahead of them, pausing in the doorway to kiss passionately. "Au revoir, my darling," muttered the siren, in a guttural voice with a marked accent. "Must you go?"

"I must, sweet." He tore himself from her arms, and hurried out. Mary and Bowen made amused grimaces at each other. In the doorway they gave an exaggerated imitation of that parting—all but the kiss. And howled with laughter.

The dandified stranger, cane over his arm, small waxed mustache bristling, paced the curb impatiently as the doorman sought a cab. Mary and Bowen, waiting their turn for a taxi, watched him involuntarily. He was like something out of "La Vie Parisienne." When the cab came up, he said loudly, "Can you take me, please, to Jupiter House, at the Point, Pleasant Hills?"

Mary clutched Bowen's arm. "I knew I'd seen him somewhere! It's Bruce Jupiter, come home!" she cried.

The rolled roast is easier to carve, but the standing roast is of superior flavor because the bones add much to the savoriness of the meat and gravy.

Variety in Roasts
From the substantial hind-quarter comes the flank, which contains no bone and may be cooked in many appetizing ways. The sirloin and porter-house furnish juicy steaks and roasts that are suitable for special occasions. A middle cut of the sirloin, the back of the rump and the chuck rib all are used and make excellent roasts of varying prices.

The preparation and cooking of roast beef is very important. Salt should not be added until the meat is at least half done. Salt sprinkled over the surface of raw beef will extract the juices, which defeats the initial purpose of roasting.

Before putting a roast in the roaster, wipe it well with a damp cloth but do not put it in water. Cold water has a tendency to draw out the juices and also toughens the fibers of the meat.

Heat is the first essential in securing the best results in all beef cookery. Intense heat is applied for the first fifteen minutes in order to sear the outer surface of the meat. This coagulates the albumin and forms a type of crust which seals in the juices and flavoring matter. Beef is the only meat which is treated this way. Pork, veal and lamb are roasted at an even temperature.

A standing rib roast needs only fifteen minutes to the pound to be roasted rare. Twenty-five to thirty minutes to the pound will produce well done roasts.

THAT MARRIED WOMEN EMPLOYMENT QUESTION—

A refreshing thought in the problem of whether or not married women should be given positions or should hold their present ones was struck in a letter to the editor of The Daily Dispatch on this pertinent subject appearing in Friday's edition.

"I believe it to be a strictly moral question with the person involved and it should be weighed by every married woman in our community," the letter reads. This is placing the responsibility on the key to the entire situation.

Continuing, the letter says that this also applies to city as well as county administrations in addition to business houses. "It surely is not conducive to good citizenship to see both sides of the household employed and some other poor devil go hungry for the want of employment," to quote the letter.

In conclusion, the writer of the letter believes that this community should apply the same tactics in Brainerd as they have in other towns; in Ramsey county for instance, the letter states. Tactics referred to included requests for the resignation of every married woman in order to give their positions to some others who needed it most. Others of a more charitable nature, the letter concludes, resigned of their own free will.

There is little use in trying to sidestep the question of employment of married women. It crops up daily and constantly is demanding more consideration. Of course, there are exceptions to every rule. Likewise, there are times when a married woman justifies her position; she is the bread winner of the family and has someone dependent upon her. It is easy to overlook this phase.

REPAIR THE STREETS—

It is high time that work is being done on the unpaved streets of Brainerd. They have become in bad need of repair and, only through a break in the weather now, will it be possible to put all into shape before the winter sets in.

Three days' work with the county grader was contracted for by the city council at its last meeting. It is imperative that this work be done at once. And, it is unfortunate that the city is not in a position to keep its own grader in condition so that it would be available at all times.

ORIGIN OF "ITASCA" A MYSTERY—

Just where Henry R. Schoolcraft got the name that he gave to the source of the Mississippi in 1832 has always been somewhat of a mystery. Traders had long known it as "Lac la Biche" or Elk Lake. The commonly accepted explanation is based on a letter written in 1872 by William T. Boutwell, the missionary, who accompanied the expedition of 1832. From this it would appear that Schoolcraft combined syllables of the Latin words "veritas," truth, and "caput," head,—suggested by Boutwell,—to form "Itasca."

Another possible explanation of the name has recently come to light. In one of two "Itasca Studies" in the September issue of the quarterly magazine of the Minnesota Historical society, attention is called to a government report by Schoolcraft, written at least seventeen years before Boutwell's letter, which indicates that the name was coined by Schoolcraft himself from terms of Indian origin.

CONSERVATIVE ENGLAND—

The thundering crash with which England's voters crushed the Labor party's strength in Parliament may mean a number of things, and will probably keep the wisecracks busy explaining and analyzing for a while.

A large part of it, undoubtedly, is simply due to the voter's traditional reaction against the party in power when times are hard. Those riots we read about in English cities during the weeks preceding the election spoke of a deep and abiding discontent; this discontent, expressing itself in ballots, knocked the country's so-called Socialist government clear out of the window.

But the most interesting thing about it is the way in which this discontent expressed itself.

Usually a nation that finds the going unendurably rough speaks its mind by calling in the radicals and giving them a chance to try out some of their panaceas. England did just the reverse. Instead of hauling off and breaking up the available china, she called in the Tories. Instead of heading farther toward Socialism, she went completely conservative.

This, perhaps, represents something more than just the regular vote again the government. It might not be stretching things to say that old England is giving the ancient, established ruling class one more chance.

Although few man-made institutions possess more stamina than the British empire, there is no denying that things in England today are in an extremely bad way. Trade has fallen off, finances are amazingly wobbly, unemployment remains an unhealed wound, taxes are unbelievably high. But the English are not yet ready to call for a new form of government, or a new kind of economic and social set-up.

Instead, the class that built up the empire, made England the world's banker and made English merchants and ships the world's greatest traders is given the reins again. If it can fix things, well and good. And if not—

Well, it is possible to find grounds for believing that the world today stands at one of the turning points of history. England—if the Tories fail—may become one of the pivots on which the ranks of mankind turn to march in a new direction.

MacDONALD'S COURAGE—

There is one angle to the recent British election that has not quite received the attention it deserves.

Some time before the election, Premier Ramsay MacDonald was called on to choose between his personal ambition and his desire to serve his country. He chose the latter alternative, broke with Labor Party leaders, and formed a species of coalition government. At the time, he realized that this might mean a complete wreck for his own career.

But in the election Mr. MacDonald scored a great victory. The voters appreciated his unselfish daring and told him so with ballots.

There is some sort of lesson in that for politicians on this side of the water. Might not the United States equally reward a leader who was consistently ready to serve the country without stopping to think about what it might cost him?

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Rich old Mrs. JUPITER is robbed and murdered during the engagement party she gave for her secretary, MARY HARKNESS. The thief fails to get the famous Jupiter necklace. Suspicion points to Mary's brother, EDDIE, who is killed by a car as he goes to meet her. Police drop the case, believing Eddie guilty. BOWEN, police reporter for the Star, conducts a private investigation. He discovers a racetrack crook called THE FLY to whom Eddie owed money. Eddie's coat, found in the house, is recognized by the latter as one worn by a "gate-crasher" he elected the night of the murder. Mary's fiancé, DIRK RUYTER, believes Eddie guilty and forbids her to see Bowen, fearing further notoriety. They quarrel but make up and plan to marry at once. Mary meets Bowen in a speakeasy where The Fly is said to be hiding. Dirk comes to take her home. He is on his way to look up the Jupiter necklace. Bowen tells Dirk proves The Fly is not there. Mary clasps the necklace about her throat just as three strangers enter.

They leave, followed by Bowen, who fears an attempt on the necklace. Dirk does not. The two men quarrel. Just as Dirk locks up the necklace there is a crash in the street outside. Bowen tells the thieves smash into his car rather than overtake Mary and Dirk. Dirk sits pool-pools the existence of The Fly and Mary goes off with Bowen.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXII

"YOU shouldn't have done that," Bowen objected. "Now how'll you get home?"

"I'm not going home just yet," Mary said. "You're going back to Shay's and get what fingerprints you can. Where are the ones you got off the gun?"

"In my hotel room," "I'll go there and wait for you. I don't feel equal to Shay's again, right now. Besides, it might be better if you went alone."

"I'll get kicked out anyway," Bowen muttered morosely. "Look," he said, "you better not do this. You better make it up with him while you can, or there's liable not to be any wedding tomorrow."

"There isn't going to be any how!" Mary flamed. "Until I find out who's right. If those fingerprints tally, there won't be any, anyway, until that man's caught one thing at a time, and that comes first with me. If they don't—if you've just been giving me a—cock-and-bull story—"

"Why should I do that?" "To get a sensational story."

"I haven't printed a line about you yet, have I?"

"Then, if that isn't the reason, Dirk said you had another—" she turned several shades of pink in quick succession, but blurted it out nevertheless—"he said you were making up excuses for sticking around because—you were in love with me."

"It didn't faze Bowen. "I don't say I'm not," he grunted, looking straight ahead.

"Oh, then—" "Every blame word I've said is the truth, and you know it!" he cried bitterly. "And I'm tired of having my word doubted! I don't have to prove it. If you want to drop the matter, we'll drop it right here and now. It's entirely up to you. I hate the fly's gizzard, but I can let my feelings go. You're the one most concerned."

Odd that it had never occurred to Dirk just that way!

"I'm going with you," "Then come on."

Bowen's hotel was just around the corner in a side-street, nearer Sixth than Fifth Avenue. It was not fashionable but clean and warm. Bowen bought some magazines at the lobby stand, and guided Mary gingerly by an elbow into a small, rose and gold room opening off the lobby.

An old woman in a soiled uniform limped forward.

"Hello, Kate," Bowen greeted her. "Take good care of this for me, will you? Till I come back."

Kate's eyes took in Mary from head to toe, with cynical interest. "Shure I will," she promised, with enthusiasm. Kate had executed commissions for newspapermen before. She would soon know what this beautiful damsel in distress had been up to. Shot her lover, perhaps. Whatever it was she'd been crying about, it thrilled Kate that she should know about it before it came out in tomorrow's papers.

MARY established herself on the shabby divan with Town and Tattle and fell to reading, more to escape the old woman's questioning than anything else. Eventually the old soul hobbled away, muttering to herself about the unattractiveness of some people.

"When they get you in the jug, you'll talk, my fine girl," she threatened through the wall.

Mary read on, oblivious of having offended. It was rather fun making out who was meant by the people referred to in those small, scandalous paragraphs in the gossip magazine. No names were mentioned, of course, but it was usually made plain enough. This, for instance:

"Why is it that we never appreciate what we have until it is another's? What child of great wealth—a bud of three seasons ago—is making rather a fool of herself over a childhood sweetheart whose devotion she was wont to ridicule until he took unto himself a fiancée? She is said to be relying heavily on the fact that the said fiancée is involved in a messy family scandal just now, which only the immense wealth and political pull of her sponsor has succeeded in squelching."

A cold prickle began to creep over Mary, and she sat upright on the couch, realizing suddenly that it must be herself who was meant! Her eyes raced on:

"Both aspirants to the hand of the blue-blooded and personable young lawyer come to the post well equipped—the deb with this world's goods, and the fiancée with more than her share of looks. But if all Dame Rumor whispers is true, and the lucky girl's elderly sponsor makes legal and binding his promise to make her his heir, then the scales will tilt heavily in her favor, and she will be able to match her rival million for million, with a few extra for good measure."

"A curious outcome, indeed, in view of the fact that the elderly protector's own wife died under mysterious circumstances recently. But Croesus will hear no ill of his Cinderella, so they say."

Mary hurried the magazine as far as she could throw it, and took a turn around the room to cool off. The impudence of it! The cowardliness!

The alert Katie looked in, but withdrew in fright before that terrible young face. Mary was still pacing restlessly about the room, from picture to picture, staring at the ugly oil landscapes with unseeing eyes, spelling out artists' names with moving lips, forgetting them as she uttered them.

Bowen should take her home at once, and the matter would be put before Mr. Jupiter. He would know what to do. "Immense wealth and political pull" indeed! If that were so, then they should be made to feel it!

But as her anger cooled she knew with sickening certainty that in showing it to Mr. Jupiter, she was keeping it from him. After all, was it any more than had been common talk for weeks? Everyone knew it was a "scurriously little sheet; everyone discounted its nasty little digs. She would only make matters worse if she made a row about it."

BOWEN came hurrying in, his arms full of packages. In his left hand he held a whisky-bottle carefully by the neck.

"Sorry to be so long," he explained, "but I had to buy some powder and some other junk. . . . I got a pretty good thumb print, I think, but the rest are not so good. . . . want a wait here a little longer till I go up and develop this? I'll hurry. . . ."

"What's the bottle for?" Mary asked, bewildered.

"Don't touch it!" He drew it away from her pointing finger. "It's the fly's. He drinks a special brand. Mike sneaked it for me while Jack's back was turned. Let me get upstairs with it, quick, before something happens to it." He was laboring under strong excitement. "Can y' imagine it? I been carrying this down the street like this. Afraid to wrap it up and smear the print. Wonder I wasn't pinched." He started off, and Mary followed.

"Oh, don't leave me here! One more black mark on my reputation won't hurt. I'm going up with you." In the elevator she asked bitterly, "Did you know what was in that magazine you gave me?"

When they were out of hearing of an exotic-looking couple who were in the elevator with them she told him. Bowen did not seem impressed.

"Oh, who reads that lousy little sheet anyway? A handful of nit-wits with more money than brains, who know it anyhow, and about a million repressed schoolteachers who won't understand it after they read it. Forget it."

"Emily Ann Ruyter reads it," Mary said worriedly. "I suppose she's in the midst of a pink fit by now."

"Forget it! We'll have Emily Ann begging your pardon on bended knee before we're through."

He propped the door of his room open with a book, and laid his purchases out on the table, the precious bottle occupying an open space all its own. After that, they did not bother to talk. Bowen set to work and Mary watched, absorbed. The thumb print came up clearly, the others were, as he had said, too faint to be of much good.

Presently he raised a flushed, perspiring countenance and said dramatically, "Now!" He laid on the table the sheet of paper containing the fingerprints obtained from the gun. Beside it he placed a fingerprint chart and a magnifying glass. Occupying the place of honor stood the whisky-bottle, erect, its powder-blackened sides showing a variety of finger-smudges.

He bent his eye to the magnifying glass, moving it from one to the other, back and forth.

"I'm no expert," he said, at last, "but if those thumb-prints aren't identical, I'll eat 'em. I'll get an expert's opinion on it, if you want it. The boys in the identification bureau will do it for me."

"Do it, will you?" she asked eagerly. "I accept your word, but we must be absolutely certain."

"Right. Tomorrow, without fail. Well, Miss Sherlock Holmes, let's shut up shop for tonight."

He removed a pile of clean shirts from a dresser drawer, laid his exhibits carefully away in the empty drawer, locked it, and they went out.

"It's only 10 o'clock," he whispered in the elevator. "You'll be home and in beddy-bye in an hour. What could be sweeter? And don't worry, your boy-friend'll come around all right. Keep a stiff upper lip, and remember what you've got now to knock sense into him with—that whisky bottle!"

SHE didn't want to hear him talk about it. She was more grateful than she could ever say for the surety he had just given her. It made her course clear. But personally, he had become fairly repulsive to her. . . . that declaration of his was shocking, somehow, centered as her emotions were in Dirk, and Dirk only. Perhaps she drew away slightly; her feelings may have shown in her face.

"Listen, forget what I said a while ago, will you?" he said. "I ought not to have—but hell, you asked for it! And I know it doesn't make any difference to you."

"Oh, I'd forgotten all about it!" she assured him, surprised at his perception.

They stepped out into the lobby. "Hungry?" he asked. "Better have a cup of coffee before you go. You look done up. Did you eat anything at Shay's?"

"Not much," she confessed and followed him, almost wobbling with faintness and weariness, to the grill, which was empty except for the couple they had seen in the elevator. Mary recognized them without more than a brief glance. The odor of the woman's oriental perfume was overpowering. The man with her was odd-looking, too—foreign, apparently. Such of their talk as drifted to her ears was in French, and his clothes sloppily worn, his hair thick and long below his large black felt hat. He wore a small waxed mustache.

Mary began to feel a peculiar uneasiness. She had been unconventional in going to that room, if anyone chose to be priggish about it. She would not have given it a second thought if it had not been for these exotic-looking people. Continentals of that type always made her rush for safety to the ideals of her Puritan ancestors.

She drank hot coffee gratefully. Bowen did not talk much.

"I was supposed to cover a Red riot in Jersey City tonight," he observed. And added complacently, "The hell with it." After that he did not talk at all.

The couple passed out of the room just ahead of them, pausing in the doorway to kiss passionately. "Au revoir, my darling," muttered the siren, in a guttural voice with a marked accent. "Must you go?"

"I must, sweet," He tore himself from her arms, and hurried out.

Mary and Bowen made amused grimaces at each other. In the doorway they gave an exaggerated imitation of that parting—all but the kiss. And howled with laughter.

The dandified stranger, cane over his arm, small waxed mustache bristling, paced the curb impatiently as the doorman sought a cab. Mary and Bowen, waiting their turn for a taxi, watched him involuntarily. He was like something out of "La Vie Parisienne."

When the cab came up, he said loudly, "Can you take me, please, to Jupiter House, at the Point, Pleasant Hills?"

Mary clutched Bowen's arm. "I knew I'd seen him somewhere! It's Bruce Jupiter, come home!" she cried.

CITY FOUNDED ON VALUABLE ORE CLAIMS, CITIZENS SKEPTICAL, PROSPECTOR AVERS

While Brainerd citizens remain skeptical of the possibilities, they continue to live, work and walk over valuable ore claims which if developed would put Brainerd on the map with a big circle around it, in the opinion of Charles E. Britton who returned to Brainerd after discovery of gold deposits in Montana.

Britton made such a statement today after he had completed a hurried survey of the mineral possibilities of Brainerd. That survey resulted in a statement by the prospector that much of the property in east Brainerd has valuable mineral deposits of iron, silver, copper, zinc, and some gold.

Among Britton's claims are that a vein of Hematite iron ore runs through the property on which the Northern Pacific shop is located and that the vein extends through east and south Brainerd branching off to the old South Sixth street mine.

Britton reported today on his discovery at the Holland property claiming that the property has three Hematite iron ore veins, and in addition veins of silver, zinc, copper and gold.

Stirring Zane Grey Story Brought to Life in Film

Filmed in the picturesque Verde Valley of Arizona where Zane Grey placed the characters of his widely read story, "Riders of the Purple Sage," the Fox action drama of the same name makes its local debut tomorrow at the Paramount theatre, with George O'Brien as the famed "Lassiter" heading the featured cast, consisting of Marguerite Churchill and Noah Beery.

The love theme is unusually predominant for a Zane Grey work, but thrills and spectacle have not been subordinated. A stampede of madmen, a thrilling race on horseback, breath-taking conflict between O'Brien and Noah Beery, a mountain avalanche and a spectacular fire by which a large ranch house is destroyed, all are interwoven into the action.

The picture was filmed in entirety in the beautiful red rock country of the Verde Valley in Arizona, a region of magnificent distances, vivid colorings, and imaginative sweep. Fox Films deserves high praise for having given the subject this splendid treatment. It gives the final, authentic touch of reality.

Joe Had Fun, But the Firemen Didn't

Denver, Colo.—Life was dull for Joe Mackalick, adding up figures on potatoes, onions, cabbages and tomatoes in a commission house here—that is, until he heard a fire engine clang up the street. Then Joe not only made life exciting for himself, but also for the fire department of the city.

For the past five months the fire department has been called out on numerous false alarms. Officials laid a trap for the culprit—and found Joe. It was found that during the past few months he had turned in from one to five alarms nightly, and that he had totaled 247 up to the time he was caught. It was figured that these alarms cost the city about $8,500, not to mention the interrupted peace of pinochle-playing firemen.

Under the law the only penalty possible was a $100 fine!

Hoover Sends Condolences to Wife of Novelist

Northfield, Minn., Nov. 7.—(UP)—Mrs. O. E. Rolvaag, wife of the internationally famous novelist who died suddenly Thursday from heart disease, today had received a telegram of condolence from President Hoover.

The telegram read: "I have learned with deep regret of the death of your husband, Ole Edvard Rolvaag, and extend my deepest sympathy to you and your son and daughter. Professor Rolvaag attained eminence as an educator and author through sterling qualities of mind and character. His writing combined the Norse tradition with the rugged Americanism of the prairie and his work both enriched American culture and won world recognition."

Sportsmen League Attacks State Transfer of Funds

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7.—(UP)—Charging illegal transfer of funds, the Minnesota State League today demanded return of $396,306 from the state revenue fund to its game and fish department.

"So-called 'cancelled balances' were attacked by the league. The total amount of these balances for the 1929-1930 period was $512,539, the league charged, while legally only $116,233 should have been transferred.

Writers Hold Hearings in Trouble at Mines

Harian, Ky., Nov. 6.—(UP)—A group of nationally known authors, including Theodore Dreiser and John Dos Passos, opened a series of hearings in a second floor hotel room today, seeking to prove their contention that authorities in this strike-torn section deprived miners of constitutional rights. Acting as the national committee for the defense of political prisoners, the group with Dreiser as chairman, first called Henry Thornton, a negro, to testify.

Ford Plant to Resume Production Soon

Dearborn, Mich., Nov. 6.—(UP)—The Ford Motor company is preparing to "step up" production immediately, it was believed here today as it was announced work had been found for the city's 2,500 unemployed.

Mayor Clyde M. Ford, cousin of Henry Ford, made the announcement as an explanation of his action in dissolving the city's unemployment committee.

"The depression as it affects Dearborn now is but a bitter memory," he said. The mayor asked, however, that warning be given that the announcement did not mean that places would be found for newcomers.

Persistent rumors have been current for the last few days that Ford will begin quantity production on his new model car so that it would be announced Nov. 15.

The new car, it is reported, will be a four cylinder machine, with some improvements over the present model "A."

17 PER CENT DROP IN BREAD PRICES REPORTED IN YEAR

BUT, COMMODITY HAS IN NO WAY KEPT PACE WITH REDUCED PRICE OF WHEAT

Washington, Nov. 4.—(UP)—The price of bread in the United States has declined approximately 17 per cent in a little more than a year but it has in no way kept step with the reduced price of wheat and flour.

Figures compiled by the department of labor statistics by the United Press today showed that in 51 cities of the country in the year ending Sept. 15, bread prices dropped 16 per cent, flour prices 25 per cent and wheat in Chicago 38 per cent.

Between Aug. 15 and Sept. 15 wheat went up 1.4 per cent, flour dropped 2.9 per cent and bread dropped 1 per cent.

The average prices for a loaf of bread in 51 cities was 7.8 cents per pound on Sept. 15. On Aug. 15, it was 7.4 and on Sept. 15, it was 8.7.

On Sept. 15, 1930, No. 2 hard winter wheat sold at 83 cents in Chicago and on Sept. 15, 1931, it sold for 51½ cents.

The following retail prices of wheat, flour and bread:

Sept. 15, 1930-Sept. 15, 1931: Wheat 38 per cent; flour 25 per cent; bread 16 per cent.

Aug. 15, 1931-Sept. 15, 1931: Wheat 1.4 per cent; flour 2.9 per cent; bread 1 per cent.

CHARGE FIVE WITH TRADING WORTHLESS BONDS TO WOMAN

MINNEAPOLIS MEN INDICTED FOR EXCHANGING WORTHLESS BONDS FOR VALUABLE ONES

Faribault, Minn., Nov. 7.—(UP)—Plea of not guilty with the privilege of withdrawing and entering demurrers were recorded today for five Minneapolis men charged with exchanging worthless bonds for valuable ones held by Mrs. Marie F. Hanson of Northfield.

The men are H. H. Ayres, John C. Kuck, H. M. Mueller, George W. Bowles and J. C. Lewis, who were indicted Thursday by the Rice county grand jury on charges of grand larceny in the first degree.

Bonds of $2,000 each were signed for the men and they were released. The date for their trial has not been set.

The indictment alleges that Mrs. Hanson owned $5,500 worth of bonds of Minneapolis properties, a corporation, and that the defendants represented the concern as not making money. They exchanged notes in the Mason City Hospital Association, a corporation of their own of an alleged value of $5,500 for the Minneapolis properties bonds. The indictment said the notes are without value and that the whole transaction was a conspiracy to defraud Mrs. Hanson.

E. D. Burgin and J. D. Harmon, who also were indicted on first degree grand larceny charges, have not yet been apprehended.

Cannon Withdraws Appeal on Recent Court Decision

Washington, Nov. 6.—(UP)—Attorneys for Bishop James Cannon, Jr., have withdrawn their appeal of a recent court decision which denied the bishop's petition for a writ of prohibition against the senate campaign funds investigating committee.

The action was dropped, it was believed, because of the subsequent indictment of Cannon on a charge of violating the corrupt practices act. The bishop had sought in District of Columbia supreme court to prevent the committee from investigating him.

TREASURY DEFICIT MOUNTS; HOOVER TO SLASH '32 EXPENSES

EXPECTS TO KEEP NEXT YEAR'S BUDGET AROUND $280,000,000 LESS

Washington, Nov. 7.—(UP)—The mounting deficit gave added weight today to President Hoover's announcement of success in cutting down government expenses next year.

While Mr. Hoover was saying he expected to keep next year's budget around $280,000,000 less than this year's expenses, the cash register in the treasury was clicking off a ticket showing the government is $678,922,344 in the red.

The treasury figure was based on receipts and disbursements in the last balanced date, Nov. 4. At that time last year the deficit was $187,099,885, but it grew to $90,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

In the face of this apparent need for government economy, the president issued late yesterday a statement laying down the principle that "nothing will contribute more to the return of prosperity than to maintain the sound fiscal position of the federal government. He said at least $350,000,000 would be saved in formulation of the budget. The departmental budgets will be cut at least that much below what they wanted.

This cooperation would reduce government expenses next year about $280,000,000 below this year, he said. He later added this figure might shrink $20,000,000 in final preparation of the budget for submission to congress.

While Brainerd citizens remain skeptical of the possibilities, they continue to live, work and walk over valuable ore claims which if developed would put Brainerd on the map with a big circle around it, in the opinion of Charles E. Britton who returned to Brainerd after discovery of gold deposits in Montana.

Britton made such a statement today after he had completed a hurried survey of the mineral possibilities of Brainerd. That survey resulted in a statement by the prospector that much of the property in east Brainerd has valuable mineral deposits of iron, silver, copper zinc, and some gold.

Among Britton's claims are that a vein of Hematite iron ore runs through the property on which the Northern Pacific shop is located and that the vein extends through east and south Brainerd branching off to the old South Sixth street mine.

Britton reported today on his discoveries at the Holland property claiming that the property has three Hematite iron ore veins, and in addition veins of silver, zinc, copper and gold.

Stirring Zane Grey Story Brought to Life in Film

Filmed in the picturesque Verde Valley of Arizona where Zane Grey placed the characters of his widely read story, "Riders of the Purple Sage," the Fox action drama of the same name makes its local debut tomorrow at the Paramount theatre, with George O'Brien as the famed "Lassiter" heading the featured cast, consisting of Marguerite Churchill and Noah Beery.

The love theme is unusually predominant for a Zane Grey work, but thrills and spectacle have not been subordinated. A stampede of maddened cattle, a thrilling race on horseback, breath-taking conflict between O'Brien and Noah Beery, a mountain avalanche and a spectacular fire by which a large ranch house is destroyed, all are interwoven into the action.

The picture was filmed in entirety in the beautiful red rock country of the Verde Valley in Arizona, a region of magnificent distances, vivid colorings, and imaginative sweep. Fox Films deserves high praise for having given the subject this splendid treatment. It gives the final, authentic touch of reality.

STRENGTHEN BRAINERD LINE FOR CROSBY-IRONTON ATTACK

SHIFT BEDORE TO CENTER; WARRIORS PLAN AIR OFFENSE

ARMISTICE DAY GRID GAME HERE TO BE COLORFUL; TWO BANDS PLAY

Shifts in the Warriors line to strengthen it to cope with the pounding of the Rangers will be made by Coaches Bill Dammann and Ben Taylor in the Armistice Day game here.

C-L Uses Straight Football
Recognizing the fact that Crosby-Ironton will persistently try line plunges to bring about a victory, the Brainerd mentors contemplate several changes in the line, notably the shifting of Bedore to center.

The Rangers' defense at the hands of Aitkin and Little Falls established the weakness of C-L in aerial attacks. Any gains they made came through the line. Crosby-Ironton is noticeably weak in passing and thus will revert to straight football.

Concentrate on Defense
Dammann and Taylor will concentrate in remaining practices to build up an impregnable defense. They will stress lateral and forward passing to create an offensive threat.

The largest attendance of any game of the season is anticipated. Two bands, the Legion Auxiliary and the Brainerd high school, will form a colorful part of the climax and last game of the season.

Defeat of Crosby-Ironton will atone for loss of games to Little Falls and Aitkin.

Defeat of Little Falls, 13 to 7 at Aitkin yesterday gave Aitkin the district football championship.

Band to Stir Enthusiasm
A large attendance at the holiday game will offset a $75 deficit in the athletic treasury of the Brainerd school, W. C. Cobb, superintendent of Brainerd schools said today.

The game will mark the first appearance of the high school band in their new uniforms. B. J. Ellertson is the director.

CREAMERY, BELL GIRLS WIN TEN PIN GAMES HERE

MRS. SWANSON SETS NEW HIGH; LEADING SCORES OF WEEK LISTED

Bell Telephone and Russell Creamery were winners in the ladies ten pin game at Van's alleys last night.

The Creamery team won three from the Brainerd Laundry while the Telephone team took two from the Northern States Power.

Mrs. Swanson chalked up the season's high count for ladies, 216 single game and 529 pins for the three games.

Dempsey's Next?

Here is Lavin Vincent, University of Utah beauty contest winner and prominent sorority girl, whose friendship with Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, has led to reports of a romance. Miss Vincent is a daughter of Joe G. Vincent, Utah financier and sportsman, with whom Dempsey recently went on a hunting trip in Wyoming.

Citizens of Denmark drank 474,000 gallons of alcohol last year as compared with 525,000 gallons the year before.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Knut Rockne casually commented a few years ago that kicking had sunk so low that it constituted hardly 25 per cent of the average team's offense. But it's a different story now.

The countryside from Maine to the Gulf to the Pacific slopes to the Dominion is dotted with good kickers—punters, placement booters and drop-kickers. Every sector boasts a dozen or more guys with the ability to set the oval down inside an opponent's 10-yard stripe and have it hop out of bounds. And the returns from the field goal department certainly indicate that games can be won by more ways than running up touchdowns.

Hewitt is Able Booter
In the east, the names of five remarkable punters stand out. They are McNamara of New York U, Wood of Harvard, Hewitt of Columbia, Morton of Dartmouth and Ferraro of Cornell. Wood and Hewitt also have uncanny dropkicking ability. The latter won two games last year solely by the field goal route. He also has a 33-yard dropkick to his credit this season. And Morton counted twice by placement kicks against Yale, giving Dartmouth a tie in the game with Yale.

Other good punters along the eastern front are Booth and Parker of Yale, Murphy of Fordham, Fields of Army, Fiesel of Syracuse, Armentrout of Carnegie Tech, and Grossman of Rutgers. Smith of Penn, Slack of New Hampshire, Wilson of W. and J., Gerstenstein of C. C. N. Y. and several others have recorded field goals this season, some of them game winners.

Olson's Long Punts Help Wildcats
Most of the midwestern kicking talent that pushes an opponent back in the shadow of his goal posts is concentrated in the toes of Marchmont Schwartz of Notre Dame, Clarence Munn of Minnesota and Ollie Olson.

No Kickers Shortage on Coast
They don't go in for field goals on a large scale west of the Rocky Mountains, but once in a while they kick one, and it's a long one. Lyle Mackell's 48-yard placement kick gave Washington State a victory over Washington last year. And this season field goals have been recorded by Dickerson of Colorado Western State, Stenzel of Colorado and Bischoff of Utah.

Pop Warner and Howard Jones believe in hanging on to the ball as long as possible, but when they let it go, they usually have a sterling punter to give it a ride. The Stanford punter this season is Phil Moffatt, little triple-threat star. The ace kicker of the Trojan eleven is Galt (Gus) Shaver, a reformed fullback now cavorting at quarterback.

Other fine punters on the coast are Brovill of St. Mary's, Hufford of Washington and Geo. of Oregon. It was the latter's kicking that held off New York U's belated efforts to avert defeat at the hands of Dr. Spears' westerners.

least the equal of any other trio in the country. Of this group, Olson is the only field goal booter. His 34-yard dropkick against Ohio State is the second longest of the current season. There are several more fine kickers in the Mississippi valley region. Berry of Illinois, Monnett of Michigan State, Weller of Haskell, Cramer of Ohio State and others are excellent punters.

Carl Zeyher, quarterback of little Muskingum College's unbeaten eleven, booted three field goals in one game, which stands as the season's high mark. Henry Cronkite, Indian back on Bo McMillin's Kansas State team, made the season's longest field goal, a 45-yarder against West Virginia. Others to break in with scores from the field were Masterson of Nebraska, Worthington of Creighton, Parsaca of Detroit and Monnett of Michigan State.

In real punting ability, the south and southwest sectors are getting sensational results from Felts of Tulane, Chandler of Georgia, Hitchcock of Auburn, Cain of Alabama, Koy of Texas, Wallace of Rice and Mason of Southern Methodist.

Cain and Chandler deserve to be ranked with the great kickers of all time. Cain is a left-footed booter. Both Dixie kickers rate in a class with Kipke, Carideo and some others. These two regions also have been active in the revival of the field goal as a means of gridiron success. Both Boswell of Texas Christian and Elam of Texas won games this fall via the field goal route. Other field goal kickers in Dixie were Jeffries of Sewanee and Lynch of Mt. St. Mary's.

FIVE UNDEFEATED TEAMS CLASH TODAY IN FEATURE GAMES

MEET OPPONENTS WHO HAVE MORE THAN OUTSIDE CHANCE OF WINNING

New York, Nov. 7.—(U.P.)—Five of the nation's undefeated major football teams—Georgia, Tulane, Northwestern, St. Mary's, Harvard and S. M. U.—swing into action today against rivals which have more than an outside chance of winning.

Georgia, headed by two all-America candidates—"Catfish" Smith, end, and Quarterback Austin Downes—take on a N. Y. U. team that undoubtedly will be stronger for the kicking it took last week at the hands of Oregon.

Tulane doesn't expect as much trouble from Auburn.

Harvard may be forced to the limit by a revived Dartmouth squad, and S. M. U., riding high, wide, and handsome in the southwest, may run into a tatter in the Texas Aggies.

The Northwestern-Minnesota game will just about decide the 1931 Big Ten championship. Neither team has lost a Big Ten foe.

Another undefeated club, St. Mary's of California, meets a worthy foe tomorrow in the Olympic club squad of former college stars.

Two other—Notre Dame and Pennsylvania—meet at South Bend, Ind. Notre Dame, with one of the best teams in Irish history, is an overwhelming favorite and promises to come through without trouble. Penn, however, is strong enough to prevent a repetition of last year's 60-to-20 drubbing.

Superior Teachers Trim Duluth Tutors 27 to 7

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 7.—(U.P.)—The Superior State Teachers college football team romped to a 27 to 7 victory over the Duluth State Teachers last night. It was their sixth consecutive victory in which they have scored a total of 219 points as compared with their opponents 12.

Court Holds for Klunk in Nan Britton Suit

Toledo, O., Nov. 6.—(U.P.)—Nan Britton's $50,000 unsuccessful libel suit based on a book which called her "morbid" and "degenerate" will be carried to the United States district court of appeals, her attorneys announced. She was denied judgment yesterday by the jury which heard her case against C. A. Klunk, Marion hotel keeper, a distributor of the book she claimed was libelous.

Miss Britton sought judgment on the grounds Klunk defamed her reputation by selling copies of "The Answer to the President's Daughter," which denied her previous written allegations that Warren G. Harding was the father of her 12-year-old daughter, Elizabeth Ann.

The Stanford booter this season is Phil Moffatt, little triple-threat star. The ace kicker of the Trojan eleven is Galtus (Gus) Shaver, a reformed fullback now cavorting at quarterback.

Other fine punters on the coast are Brovelli of St. Mary's, Hufford of Washington and Gee of Oregon. It was the latter's kicking that held off New York U's belated efforts to avert defeat at the hands of Dr. Spears' westerners.

McFadden Pays Visit to Twin Cities

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 6.—(UP)—Bernard MacFadden, 62-year-old New York publisher, philanthropist and athlete, today spent a half hour in the Twin Cities during which time he commented on the economic situation, saw half a dozen magazine dealers, almost ran a foot race and sped away on a 1200-mile flight.

"Increased wheat and cotton prices are the best news we have had in many months," MacFadden commented. "Looks like more good news in the future too. Magazine prices are dropping but I am going to find out whether the public really wants lower priced magazines or whether the present high standards are to be maintained. That's why I am visiting the dealers."

12-Year-Old Boy Brings Down First Deer of Year

Deadwood, S. D., Nov. 6.—(UP)—Melvin Good, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Good of Whitewood brought down the first deer of the season in the northern hills when he shot a 300-pound buck on his father's ranch.

FIVE UNDEFEATED TEAMS CLASH TODAY IN FEATURE GAMES

MEET OPPONENTS WHO HAVE MORE THAN OUTSIDE CHANCE OF WINNING

New York, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Five of the nation's undefeated major football teams—Georgia, Tulane, Northwestern, St. Mary's, Harvard and S. M. U.—swing into action today against rivals which have more than an outside chance of winning.

Georgia, headed by two all-America candidates—"Catfish" Smith, end, and Quarterback Austin—takes on a N. Y. U. team that undoubtedly will be stronger for the licking it took last week at the hands of Oregon.

Tulane doesn't expect as much trouble from Auburn.

Harvard may be forced to the limit by a revived Dartmouth squad, and S. M. U., riding high, wide, and handsome in the southwest, may run into a tatter in the Texas Aggies.

The Northwestern-Minnesota game will just about decide the 1931 Big Ten championship. Neither team has lost to a Big Ten foe.

Another undefeated club, St. Mary's of California, meets a worthy foe tomorrow in the Olympic club squad of former college stars.

Two others—Notre Dame and Pennsylvania—meet at South Bend, Ind. Notre Dame, with one of the best teams in Irish history, is an overwhelming favorite and promises to come through without trouble. Penn, however, is strong enough to prevent a repetition of last year's 60-to-20 drubbing.

WRESTLING RESULTS

By United Press
At Jamaica Arena, New York—Herr Deplene, Paris, threw Al Baffort, Los Angeles; Len Macaluso, Buffalo, threw Sgt. Jack Reynolds.

Superior Teachers Trim Duluth Tutors 27 to 7

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 7.—(UP)—The Superior State Teachers college football team romped to a 27 to 7 victory over the Duluth State Teachers last night. It was their sixth consecutive victory in which they have scored a total of 219 points as compared with their opponents 12.

Court Holds for Klunk in Nan Britton Suit

Toledo, O., Nov. 6.—(UP)—Nan Britton's $50,000 unsuccessful libel suit based on a book which called her "morbid" and "degenerate" will be carried to the United States district court of appeals, her attorneys announced. She was denied judgment yesterday by the jury which heard her case against C. A. Klunk, Marion hotel keeper, a distributor of the book she claimed was libelous.

Miss Britton sought judgment on the grounds Klunk defamed her reputation by selling copies of "The Answer to the President's Daughter," which denied her previously written allegations that Warren G. Harding was the father of her 12-year-old daughter, Elizabeth Ann.

GRANDI SETS SAIL FOR U. S. BEARING THREE PROPOSALS

DEBTS, DISARMAMENT, TREATY REVISION TO BE DISCUSSED BY ITALIAN MINISTER

Rome, Nov. 7.—(U.P.)—Foreign Minister Dino Grandi sailed for the United States at 4:10 p. m. today, prepared to stress Premier Benito Mussolini's belief that world economic problems require the close collaboration of the Washington government with Europe.

The fascist foreign minister received final instructions from the premier last night. He will devote his time in America to discussion of international questions, especially preparations for the 1932 world disarmament conference.

Grandi believes disarmament is the most pressing problem and will put reparations and war debts and war treaties in the background.

The Italian position on the three problems was summarized as follows:

1. Disarmament: Italy is prepared for drastic disarmament on the condition that all nations disarm equally.
2. Treaty revision: Italy favors a peaceful revision or modification of the peace treaties, including the treaty of Versailles, particularly in regard to frontier lines.
3. Debts: Italy favors reduction or cancellation of the war debts and reparations as relief for economic ills.

The government considers the war debts owed the United States and Britain interdependent with reparations payments from Germany.
